W: How's it going, Liam?

M: Good, Emily. Are you about to go indoor rock climbing like you do every weekend?

W: I am. Do you want to try it, too?

M: Maybe, but I wonder why you enjoy it so much.

W: I think indoor rock climbing helps improve problem-solving skills.

M: Really? How so?

W: You use strategic thinking to solve the problem of getting to the top. That means you have to strategically plan the holds to grab.

M: Hmm, I can see that. What if the plan doesn't work though?

W: You have to adapt your plan while climbing. It makes you better at adjusting to new information. That's the basics of solving problems.

M: That makes sense.

W: Yeah. I'm sure your problem-solving skills will improve if you go indoor rock climbing.

M: Okay. I'll try it.

3. 다음을 듣고, 남자가 하는 말의 요지로 가장 적절한 것을 고르시오.

M: Good afternoon, students. I'm Mr. Flynn, your school counselor. If you become anxious when facing an important job interview or presentation, I have a useful tip for you. Making a big pose can relieve your anxiety. For example, you can stretch out your arms in a V-shape and hold that pose. Also, you could make a big pose as your favorite superhero does in the movies. When you make a big pose, you'll occupy more space. Then, your body will send a message to your brain saying that you're powerful, which will ease your anxiety. Next time you want to feel less anxious, try to make a big pose.

4. 대화를 듣고, 그림에서 대화의 내용과 일치하지 않는 것을 고르시오.

W: Mr. Howard, how was your family trip to Compton Railway Museum over the weekend?

W: Let me see. Wow, there's a train on the rails.

M: Yeah. Do you see the boy wearing a heart-patterned T-shirt next to the train?

W: He looks so lovely. Is he your son?

M: He is. We took a walk through the museum. It was really good.

W: I can see. Oh, there's a bench in front of the shop window. It looks nice. Did you get anything from the shop?

M: Yes. Look at the flower-shaped doormat on the ground. I bought one like that.

W: It's so cute. The three chairs around the table look convenient. Did you take a break there?

M: We did.

W: The museum seems worth visiting. I'll have to go there.

M: Honey, I'm excited that we're opening our homemade-pie store tomorrow.
W: Me, too. Do you think everything's ready?
M: I do. But let's go over what we've done.
W: Good idea. I completed the product list for sale. Did you take photos of the pies?
M: I took photos of the walnut, pumpkin, blueberry, and apple pies.
W: Perfect. What about uploading information onto social media?
M: Don't worry. I advertised our pies on social media.
W: I hope it brings in a lot of customers. I also prepared forks and plates for customers on our opening day.
M: One more thing, don't forget to confirm the delivery of the ingredients for making more pies.
W: Right. I'll do that this afternoon.
M: Wonderful. See, we're ready for tomorrow.

W: Well, we have it in three sizes. The small one is $50, the medium is $70, and the large is $100.

M: I'll take one medium-sized heater. Do you also have slippers?

W: Yes. We have wool and leather ones. A pair of wool slippers is $5, and a pair of leather ones is $10.

M: Hmm, I'll take two pairs of leather ones.

W: Great. So, one medium-sized electric heater and two pairs of leather slippers. Is that correct?

M: Yes, that's right. Can I use this 10% off coupon?

W: I'll check. [Pause] Oh, I'm sorry. You cannot use this coupon because it isn't valid anymore.

M: That's okay. Here's my credit card.

W: No, my doctor actually encourages me to drink tea. He says it's good for my health.

W: If I were you, I wouldn't spend more than $10. That's too expensive.

M: You're right. What about the handle material?

W: I don't recommend a wood handle because it's harder to wash.

M: That's a good point. Next is the number of knives.

W: Well, each person in your family needs their own knife.

M: There's my wife, my son, and me. That means I'll need at least three knives.

W: How might that help?

M: Getting children involved in meal preparation makes them interested in new foods, which can increase the variety of foods they eat.

W: I can see that. But would it work for my daughter?

M: It was a success with my son when he was your daughter's age.

M: Olivia and Andy are classmates who are taking a history course together. In the class, they're assigned a team project. For this project, they decide to create a bicycling route map of local historical sites. First, they pick some historical sites to include in the map. Next, they start discussing how to create the map. Andy says that they can generate the route map by using only the Internet. However, Olivia has a different idea. She thinks the Internet cannot provide all the information they need, such as closed paths or less difficult routes for bicycling. So, Olivia wants to suggest that they go to each site themselves by riding their bicycles for the project. In this situation, what would Olivia most likely say to Andy?

W: Hello, students. Do you know that plants often help scientists understand the wonders of nature? Let's look at some plants that are perfect for science experiments because they grow quickly. First, bamboo is known for quick growth, with some varieties growing inches per day. Therefore, it absorbs a large amount of CO₂, so it's often used in studies about how to reduce climate change. Second, lettuce grows quickly and is sensitive to environmental conditions. So, scientists grow it to see the effects of various chemicals on plant growth. Third, sunflowers are known for their remarkable growth rate, sometimes reaching several feet in just a few months. That's why scientists use them to learn about the effects of soils on plant height. Finally, peas are classic plants for experiments about genetics as they grow quickly and have easily observable characteristics like seed color and shape. For these reasons, the famous scientist, Mendel, studied them. After a short break, we'll look at other plants that are good for science experiments.
