M: Good afternoon, Grand High School students. This is Mr. Owen, your vice principal. Our school's dance competition is next Friday. So, I want to ask all dance teams to check their performance schedule for the competition. We have a very tight schedule since there'll be more than 15 teams and we need to finish the competition by 5 p.m. The performance schedule will be posted tomorrow morning on the auditorium's door. Once again, don't forget that all dance teams should check the performance schedule. Thank you for your cooperation.

2. 대화를 듣고, 여자의 의견으로 가장 적절한 것을 고르시오.

M: Amy, your workspace looks so different!

W: Does it? I just put some familiar stuff like family photos and postcards from my travels on my desk.

M: They really look nice.

W: You know what? I think having familiar things around makes us feel more comfortable.

M: Really? I usually don't put any familiar stuff on my desk because I don't think it would shift my feelings.

W: When I'm stressed, I feel relaxed at the sight of my family photo on the desk.

M: Hmm. That's interesting.

W: If you try to look at something familiar, you'll feel more comfortable.

M: I guess you're probably right.

W: I do think you'll feel relaxed when you have those familiar things around you.

M: I see. I should try it.

W: You definitely should.

3. 다음을 듣고, 남자가 하는 말의 요지로 가장 적절한 것을 고르시오.

M: Hey, everyone. It's Kevin Allen from K.Allen Channel! Do you ever endlessly watch multiple TV episodes in one sitting by yourself? Even though everyone needs time alone, I strongly believe that spending time together with friends makes life more meaningful. Think back to when you tried a new restaurant with friends or had an unplanned adventure with them. Those shared meaningful experiences don't just create wonderful memories. They also strengthen your bonds with your friends and provide support when you try something new. As you plan the week ahead, make sure to meet friends and create meaningful moments together. Remember, every person needs these connections to feel fulfilled.

M: It's really beautiful. Wow, there are also two boats!

W: Yeah. They look nice on the water.

M: Oh, there's a man wearing sunglasses.

W: That's my dad. He seems to be enjoying the weather.

M: I recognize the girl in the heart-patterned tube.

W: Right, that's me. I was in the tube most of the day.

M: It looks like you had fun! By the way, is that a ball on the chair?

W: Yes, my dad and I played with the ball from time to time.

M: You know, we should go there with our children.

W: Wow, you've been busy! I helped with the warm-up stretches.

M: That's great. Earlier, I noticed some students were unsure about where to go.

W: I saw that as well, so I guided them to their event areas.

M: That was really thoughtful of you.

W: Thanks. Then, are you all done with everything?

M: Not yet. I'll announce the winners for the running events later this afternoon.

W: Oh, you're the one who'll call out the winners' names after each race?

W: I am. It also has special lectures by invited speakers. One of them is Natalie Moodies, my favorite artist.

W: Okay. What do you want to focus on when learning the language?

M: Since this is my first trip there, I need to learn a lot of new vocabulary.

W: Alright, so you have two options left that would work.

W: Hello, everyone. Today, we'll start by discussing how different countries are working to reduce carbon emissions. As you might know, Sweden was the first country to introduce carbon pricing and had the highest carbon tax in the world in 2023. The country is aiming to cut greenhouse gas emissions by 59% by 2030 compared with 2005. Also, Denmark is working to source at least half of its energy needs from renewables by 2030. The country's energy mix has diversified to include more biofuels, wind and solar generation. Next, Hungary plans to generate 90% of its energy from carbon-free sources by 2030. Part of this plan includes financial support for the purchase of zero-emission vehicles and a huge increase of solar power. Lastly, France is aiming to achieve a net zero carbon economy by 2050. The country is reducing its reliance on fossil fuels and investing in renewables. These countries' efforts to lower carbon emissions are clearly standing out. After a short break, we'll explore the world's biggest carbon polluters.
